NEW RACE BEING BRED IN HAWAII

The Japanese question is uppermost in every discussion of the future of the Hawaiian islands and their relations to the United States.

First we must call attention to the fact that the island group is the western outpost of American fortifications, and, as such, occupies a position of immense strategic importance. Its position is of such value from the standpoint of America's defense in the Pacific that every effort to perfect its facilities, primarily as a naval base, has been made by the federal government.

Since Hawaii in 1898 became an integral portion of the United States, a large portion of its commercial development has hinged on the establishment here of naval base and army posts. Thousands of soldiers and sailors make their home in Hawaii and contribute their due portion of community wealth.

Due to the importance of the island of Oahu in naval strategy, the island center has grown to include the largest military department in the United States army stationed here to protect the naval station.

Key to Pacific.

Thus side by side the great military and naval forces of the United States command what is, obviously, the most enviable strategic point in the Pacific. In fact, Hawaii is the only major spot in the Pacific Ocean, from the equator on the South to Alaska on the North, and between American and Asiatic points where water, fuel or food may be obtained. It has been named "The Key of the Pacific" and the "Gibraltar of the Pacific."

Now comes the question of the growing preponderance of Japanese influence on the islands and what will the situation be in the event of a war between Japan and the United States, which we all hope and many of us believe, will never happen, especially if the United States maintains itself in the future as the commanding power in the Pacific waters.

During our stay on the islands we have seen the privilege to visit one of the largest public schools in Honolulu, where about 800 children, a large share of them of other than American ancestry, are being educated similar as they would be in any public school in the United States.

It is such a visit to the schools where the children of all of the races of the islands are gathered together and are taught not only the American language, but American ideals, American patriotism and American view points, where the natives children of mixed races gradually lose the ties that bind them to the countries from which their ancestors sprang, which inspires me to believe that these people who know no country except Hawaii, a part of America, are a coming generation of loyal American citizens whether they be of Japanese ancestry or otherwise.

My opinion in respect to the gradual Americanization of the Japanese population of the islands is in harmony with that of leading educators on the islands, as well as the expressions of the Japanese newspapers themselves, from one of which, the "Nippu Jiji" we clip the following paragraphs at random:

"We have here in Hawaii a different situation from that on the mainland. On the mainland, in such place as New York, children of immigrants live in communities of their own race. They tend to acquire the habits of their parents. But in Hawaii children of all races mix and mingle very freely. You don't find a little Japan or a little China in the midst of our community.

"The tendency is toward assimilation. There is no reason why the younger generation cannot or do not assimilate. The universal law of education is that we are opposed to fine-tuning of the things we don't know. We oppose things we don't know about. Those who claim that Japanese children do not assimilate are those who don't know the situation as it exists here."

"Two sets of ideals are prevalent in Japanese homes. The citizens have come to adopt American customs and mode of living, while their fathers and mothers still cling to their old-fashioned life. This divergent understanding of life as exemplified in a Japanese home has been the source of difficulty to the younger people. Time is a panacea for all ailments. The older people are coming to realize the hardships their sons are encountering and are openly adopting means of easing their burden. While 'daddy' and 'mommy' are satisfied with Japanese delicacies, their children have an inclination for American food."

I will now reprint below a part of an article on the school situation, written by W. E. Givens, superintendent of public instruction for the islands:

"In 1880, there were no children of Japanese ancestry in the schools of Hawaii. There were only 85 children of Chinese ancestry. The 7,000 children that were in the schools of Hawaii in 1880 were very largely Hawaiian and Part-Hawaiian children.

"In 1890, out of the public school population of 7,343, there were 89 children of Japanese ancestry.

"In 1900, ten years later the public school population had increased to 11,601. The number of Japanese children had increased from 89 to 1,352.

"In 1910, the public school population had increased to 20,245. The children of Japanese ancestry increased from 1,352 to 6,557.

"In 1920, the public school population had grown to 41,566. The pupils of Japanese ancestry increased from 6,557 to 19,354.

"In 1925, the public school enrollment increased to 53,377. The children of Japanese ancestry had increased from 19,354 to 23,308.

"The large number of Japanese children, which we have in our public schools, are clean, neat, and industrious. They are making fine progress in the public schools in face of the fact that to a large number of them, English is a strange language. They are, therefore, having to learn a new language at the same time that they receive a common school education. Although problems have arisen in Hawaii and are still arising, I am of the firm conviction that they can all be settled through tolerance, through knowledge of the other fellow and his problems and through public education."

In the minds of many of the people I have come in contact with the problem of the future is more economic than political. The young Japs are being educated and when educated refuse to go back to the plantations, where their parents spend their lives struggling for a mere livelihood. They are branching out into all of the trades and professions and with their industry and intelligence they are gradually supplanting the whites in business and in the professions.

With a new generation of American citizens of Japanese and Chinese ancestry growing in wealth and importance, in the economic life of the islands, but separated from the old oriental customs and family life by reason of the exclusion laws which have stopped immigration, we can expect the "melting pot" in Hawaii to produce in time a new race which will retain the best from all.

With the scarcity of Japanese and Chinese labor on the plantations, an influx of Filipinos into the islands is seen, which will add still more to the list of nationalities already so interesting a study here.

WHEAT CUTTING IN PROGRESS IN THIS SECTION

A number of farmers that have fortunate in saving part of their wheat due to winter conditions, are now cutting the crop. It has turned out much better than anticipated and the heads are well filled. Many think they will have 10 to 12 bushels while others place their estimates as high as 15 and 18 bushels. It will not be many days until the oats will be ready and hay harvest is right here. A busy time confronts farmers the next ten days.

WELL KNOWN FARMER MEETS INSTANT DEATH

This community was greatly shocked last Saturday night when word was received here of the untimely death of William Smith, 50, prominent farmer, residing north-east of town, when he was killed instantly at the Selma crossing by a fast west-bound Pennsylvania passenger train.

Mr. Smith had left the Robert Elder grocery in Selma and had started for the home of his brother, Mr. Howard Smith, one-half mile south of Selma. It is said that his coupe had not been working right and after a few minutes work with it, he succeeded in getting it started. With a lunge it started and in a second was on the track where it was his broadside by the train going 75 miles an hour. The body was thrown clear of the wreckage. Beside a fractured skull there were other abrasions and broken bones which meant almost instant death.

The body was taken to the home of his brother, Howard, where it remained until the day of the funeral, which was held Tuesday afternoon, and was one of the largest attended for some years in that section.

The deceased was a member of the Friends Church in Selma and was one of the most successful farmers in this community. He was of a quiet unassuming disposition and highly respected by all who knew or had business dealings with him.

Mr. Smith was married to Miss Flora McDorman, whose death took place seven years ago. He is survived by two daughters, Misses Esther and Virginia Smith, who have made their home with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Smith. Beside Mr. Smith, the brother, the deceased is also survived by one sister, Mrs. Edith Sharpless, who resides near Philadelphia, Pa., and was unable to come to the funeral due to a recovery of pneumonia.

Interment took place in the Selma cemetery.

OHIO'S HOG TOTAL SAID TO BE LEAST IN FIFTEEN YEARS

Ohio farmers have fewer hogs, on their farms today than in the past 15 years, according to the state-federal crop report and rural economists at Ohio State University, point out that 20 per cent of this decrease came within the past year during the corn short age.

"The decrease was greater in Ohio than in most corn belt states," says Mr. Arnold, one of the economists. "The total decrease for the corn belt amounted to only 16 per cent. The reason for the 20 per cent decrease in the number of hogs in Ohio was unquestionably because the corn crop of last year was much shorter in proportion to a normal crop in this state than in almost any other corn belt state."

"In Ohio the decrease in yield last year compared with the yield in 1923 was almost 37 per cent, while the other corn belt states averaged only a 25 per cent and the whole United States only 22 per cent.

"This short corn crop together with unattractive prices sent many hogs to market during the late fall and early winter and left Ohio farmers with the fewest hogs in 15 years."

Cow Eats Bankroll

Johnny Shuling of Salisbury, N. C., left his coat with a $200 bankroll hanging on a fence. While he worked at a cow eat the coat. Johnny, just as hungry for money as the cow, promptly shot the animal. Then, scornful all rules of carving he knifed his way towards the money, but he couldn't find much in the end. Now the Treasury department is using a magnifying glass trying to get a rebate for Johnny.

WHITE CROSSES WILL MARK BAD CROSSINGS

COLUMBUS, OHIO.
A letter directed to State Highway way Director L. A. Boulay and the all division highway engineers of the state, Governor Vic Donahey came out wholeheartedly in favor of the expenditure of gasoline tax money for the construction of gravel roads.

The governor is vigorously opposed to the use of gas tax money for the maintenance of expensive hard surfaced roads. Other revenues available to the highway department can be used for that purpose, he believes, leaving the gas tax money to be diverted into channels where it is most needed—the getting of the farmer out of the mud.

The governor's letter to the highway officials follows:

"The people of Ohio are now paying a two-cent tax on gasoline, as well as a full license fee (for the year 1925), Forty-five per cent of this gas tax is to go to the state highway department, to be expended under their supervision. In addition to this maintenance and repair fund, you have your construction fund."

"I do not know in what manner you might intend to use this money, or how busy you are engaged at present in formulating plans contemplating the expenditure of your various funds.

"It is my purpose, in this letter, to tell you what I think you should do. You should well know what the people of Ohio expect. They expect to see a large increase in our all-year road mileage; they expect to see as little as possible spent in the widening and resurfacing of a state-owned and existing pavement that are at present in good condition for traffic or that can be placed and kept in good condition without any unreasonable expense."

"I am certain that the money will do little good in developing such additional mileage, if you are to recommend the obligation of the state to pay for new construction, widening and resurfacing, without first weighing the matter very carefully and considering whether or not any particular contemplated expenditure might not possibly do more good, if spent on stage construction at a decidedly less cost per mile. Native markets in close proximity to the roads to be improved should be used wherever possible, and every known principle of good economic exercised."

"I know that conditions are not uniform over the entire state. I also know that you should know your own section of the state and should be in position to give this matter proper consideration."

SAFETY UPON HIGHWAYS
The Ohio state highway system is being improved by the state highway department. It is to be used by the state highway department in designating points where traffic fatalities have occurred, so as to improve upon motorists the necessity of driving carefully.

In a proclamation issued by Gov. A. V. Donahey, the highway department is instructed to begin erecting the crosses July 1 "on the state system at each place where fatal accidents have occurred—one for each person killed."

"By marking the points of past negligence and mishap," he said, "the state will join itself in the campaign to warn the passing motorist of danger, to drive carefully for his own safety and that of others."

In the governor's proclamation boards of county commissioners are urged to mark county roads with "inexpensive, small white crosses."

The crosses are to be constructed of two by four-inch lumber, four feet high. Boards of county commissioners will be informed that they may order the crosses for their own highways; from the department of public welfare, if they desire.

In closing his proclamation, Gov. Donahey said:

"It is fitting, therefore, that warning be given and measures taken to promote safety upon the highways, and so I, Vic Donahey, governor of Ohio, by virtue of authority vested in me by the laws and constitution, hereby call upon all citizens of this state and visitors therein to observe and obey all laws, ordinances, rules and regulations relating to driving upon public highways and streets in Ohio, directing particular attention to the following safety rules:

"1.—Take no chances.

"2.—Consider the rights of others—both motorists and pedestrians.

"3.—Observe strictly all official highway warning signs.

"4.—Never attempt to race the train to the crossing.

"5.—Observe the eighteenth amendment as a traffic safety measure."

Grabbie Explains Act
Columbus.—Atty. Gen. Grabbie said that under the provision of the Bond act, prohibition agents may be hired for any length of time and kept in office so long as they bring in a sufficient return in fines to cover their salaries.

The act provides that agents must be employed on a salary and not a split-fee basis. Grabbie said that while the practice of hiring agents to hold office only so long as they cover their salaries with the return in fines is an evasion of the law, it is legal.

ORDER YOUR FENCE NOW
Let us have your order now for American or Anthony fence. We have steel posts and split locust posts.

FRIENDS' CHURCH IN XENIA END KLAN DOMINATION

The Friends church in Xenia has for some time been under the domination of the Klan. The pastor has been Rev. A. J. Furstenberger, secretary of the Klan, spiritual advisor of that organization, leader in the Democratic county committee and former Democratic candidate for state representative in the county at the last regular election.

Trouble has been brewing in the Friends church for some time over the Klan issue. It is said that at a recent meeting of the Klan one Sunday afternoon, Rev. Furstenberger, told of his plight, and invited Klan friends out that night to the Friends church. The house was packed with Klan members, the great majority of whom were non members of the Friends church. When it came time to vote only members of the church had a part. From surface indications, it appears now as if the Rev. had only invited his friends out to witness his own funeral.

The Friends not only dispensed with Rev. Furstenberger's services, but filed notice with the Probate Court that Rev. Furstenberger was no longer pastor but not connected with that denomination. Ths gave the minister no legal standing in the county to permit him to officiate in marriages.

It is said that 190 members of the Friends church that were Klansmen have joined with their former pastor and have organized a congregation under the control of the United Brethren denomination. They hold their services in the Klan temple.

The question now is what stand will the Greene County Ministerial Association take upon Rev. Furstenberger being identified with that body?

DR. J. P. WHITE DECLARES U. P. PULPIT VACANT

Dr. J. P. White, for the past six years pastor of the United Presbyterian congregation preached his fare well sermon last Sabbath morning at which time he declared the pulpit vacant.

Several months ago Dr. White notified the congregation of his intention to resign during the summer due to physical ailment that he has been afflicted with for more than a year.

During the sermon Dr. White took occasion to review some of the accomplishments during his pastorate. There were 107 accessions to the roll of the church. During this time about $68,000 was paid by the church membership for various purposes. Of this amount $16,000 has been paid to the New World Movement of the denomination. About $11,000 to agencies out side of the church such as Cedarville College, Red Cross and other work of a like nature.

The relationship between the pastor and his people has been the most cordial and it was with much regret on the part of the congregation, as well as the community that Dr. White found it necessary to give up his life work. It is the hope of the community that his rest will add to his days and aid him in overcoming his affliction.

Dr. White and family came here from Albia, Iowa, six years ago this summer. He has held several important charges, one of which was in Topeka, Kan. He has served in the foreign mission field, in Egypt, with his wife and has had many accomplishments in the religious field that will be a comfort for recollection now that he is giving up pastoral work.

Lesson for July 5

THE BEGINNING OF FOREIGN MISSIONS.

LESSON TEXT—Acts 13:1-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—And He said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature.—Mark 16:15.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Men Become Foreign Missionaries.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How Foreign Missions Began.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Beginning of Foreign Missions.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Holy Spirit in Foreign Missions.

I. The Gifts of the Church at Antioch (vv. 1-3).
Young as Antioch, the new religious center was, she had prophets and teachers. In Eph. 4:8-12 Paul declares that when Christ ascended He gave gifts to men for the purpose of perfecting the saints unto the work of the ministry. This shows that the church does not exist for itself, but for service to others. Christ, the head of the church, came not to be ministered to, but to minister and give His life a ransom for many (Matt. 20:28).

II. Barnabas and Saul Sent Forth (vv. 2-3).
These were the first foreign missionaries sent out. While the five ministers were praying and fasting, the Spirit of God commanded them to send forth Barnabas and Saul. The work of evangelizing the world was laid so heavily upon these men that they refrained from eating in order to seek the will of the Lord in prayer. This is the kind of fasting that meets God's approval. From the fact that they were directed to send forth those whom the Spirit called, we learn that the real call to Christ's service comes from the Spirit. The Spirit called and the church seconded the motion by sending those who were called by Him. The church should be constantly seeking the mind of the Spirit relative to the sending forth of laborers into the vineyard. The Spirit called and the church sent the very best men from the church at Antioch. These men seem to have been ready to go for they rendered instant obedience. This should be our attitude toward the Lord's work, holding ourselves in readiness for the immediate execution of His commission. Those who have received the Spirit's call are not taken by surprise when the church sets them forward to their specific work.

III. Preaching the Word of God in Cyprus (vv. 4-5).
We are not told as to why they first went to Cyprus, but we are left to infer that it was owing to the fact that it was the home of Barnabas. He was acquainted with the country and people, and could thus be assured of a respectable hearing among them. Besides it is most natural that those who have heard the good news to go with it first to their kindred and friends. Andrew first went to his brother, and the man out of whom the demons were cast was identified the pleasure of his request to follow Jesus. Christ commanded him to go home and tell what great things the Lord had done for him (Luke 8:39). As they went forth they carefully carried out their commission for they preached the Word of God, not current history, philosophy, ethics, etc. Those who are faithful to God will never preach anything but His Word. The great need today is Spirit-filled, Spirit-led men preaching God's Word. In fact Spirit-filled men will preach nothing else. The opposer of God and Christ can only be successfully met by this means.

IV. Withstood by Elymas, the Sorcerer (vv. 6-12).
Sergius Paulus, the deputy, invited Barnabas and Saul to tell him of the Word of God. Elymas maliciously sought to turn his mind from the faith. This is the first obstacle they encountered, but it was overcome through the power of the Spirit. This opposer is the same one who came to Adam in the garden of Eden, and Jesus in the wilderness. He is the enemy of God and man. He now sought to turn the gospel as it entered upon its career of the conversion of the heathen. Paul denounced him in the most scathing terms. He called him the child of the devil, denounced him as full of guile and villainy, perverting him the enemy of all righteousness, accusing him of perverting the right ways of the Lord. Surely a man is never more of a villain than when trying to turn a soul from the gospel.

Our Life

We are living now by justice, honor and mercy, by the moral mastery of ourselves and of our time; and this life while in time is not of time; it is life in God and for God; it is the life of freedom; it is free from anxiety, fear, doubt, despair, death; it is content with God and with His law in God.—George A. Gordon.

Her Part in 'Wedding Belles'

By VERRICK SMALLMAN

WHAT on earth are you putting these in for?" exclaimed Rose Turner as Lila carefully arranged certain garments upon the rack of her wardrobe trunk. The garments were those of a widow, a very Parisian, smart little widow to be sure, but Lila, to her friend's knowledge, had never been married.

"Got an idea. Ever have one?" laughed Lila. "I didn't have any vacation last year so I've got a whole month this year. And if all goes well I'm never coming back to this moth-balled old town where I've lived all my life. I'm going to get a transfer."

"Oh, a job in California?" smiled Rose.
"No, unless you call a husband a job," confessed Lila. "Look here, Rose, we just got around and round in the same circle. If we do meet anybody worth while from outside, we don't get a second look. Oh, we're young enough and pretty enough!"

"Thanks!"
"Keep the tip! Who does get the to-be-married looks? The bride, of course. Unknown, mysterious, camouflaged widow! Look at that little Mrs. Andrews, and Mrs. Harlowe, with the baby face and the full-grown past!"

Rose caught the idea. "Yes, and then fancy little lavender widows from New Orleans last winter. Remember?"

"Certainly. I didn't play the part of that clinging-vine young Widow Pellow in 'Wedding Belles' for the Sirliners last month for nothing."

Rose recalled her roommate's flimsy figure enhanced by silvery floating veils and crisp black flairs. "You were the hit of the whole show," she acknowledged.

"I always could wear black," Lila said, glancing in the mirror at the delicate ivory line of her brows. "Those very man's a soul artist at heart," Lila went on. "A helpless little widow, heart-broken, lonesome, reaching out for something."

"Someone," corrected Rose. "Gets their immediate attention," continued Lila. "She's a contrast from all this athletic, trouser-wearing, heretofore-slight, stuff that most young girls pull nowadays."

"All millionaires in favor of young widows say 'aye,'" Rose sang out. "Ah, the eyes have it!"

"Nobody knows me at the 'San Clemente,'" said Lila. "And widows don't get expensive divorces. I've saved money to last a month. Rose, I'm as desolate as Jesse James. I won't fail!"

"Lila," Rose said, "I hear millions pining you!"
And so did Lila herself when she sped away on the Sunny California Limited the next day—millions of doubts!

Mrs. Ambroy-Meredith, the apparently wealthy society matron with the bourgeois habit of introducing clever people to smart people, in reality a paid chaperon hired by the shrewd San Clemente management, made a mental note as she stylish and lovely Mrs. Lila Pellow-Elli registered, taking a modest but pleasantly situated single-room suite.

Lila was lovely, she was mysterious and she had a shy smile.
Half of her vacation fled by on gilded wings and Lila more than realized her ambition to meet new and eligible men. She gathered proposals as other women gathered sea shells, and yet she considered her plan had failed.

And then gay handsome headstrong Dick Brenden appeared and Lila realized how little money can count for not the Dick didn't have any. He had enough, but Lila knew she would have loved him had he been a bell-hop.

Two more weeks. Then a certain night upon the beach, a golden moon gliding the sands, distant music, whispering waters and the magical music of pounding pulses and leaping hearts, the magic that depends upon neither moonlight nor music nor the glamour of gold, the magic of youth and love.

"I can't marry you, Dick," Lila heard herself saying very low. "I've deceived you. I'm not what I pretended to be, a widow." Richard grey visibly pale and gulped.

"You mean you're—you're married?" he asked.
"No, no," cried Lila. "I'm only—" "I don't care who you are or what you are. I love you," Dick said.

"I'm only a typist," Lila rushed to explain. "I've never been married in my life. My name's only Lila Pitt. Every man seemed so crazy about widows that I thought—You are, Dick!"

"I'd be crazy about you, Lila, if you were a widow for the third time, you—you pretender!"
"I got the idea from a part, Mrs. Pellow, I played in—"

"Wedding Belles!" I know, Lila, I wrote the blamed thing. To find out if widows were the peach of every man's eye. Then vice versa there might be a chance for widowers!"
"Oh, Dick!"

"Sorry, dear, but I pretended, too. I've two wonderful kiddies with my sister. Guess that let's me out!"
"Dick Brenden, if you don't marry me soon the hotel'll let me out. My money's melted away!"

"And the kiddies, dear?"
"Dick, I'd love you if you had a dozen. I'm so happy I could be—"

"Don't, Lila! Never be a widow again, please!"

It is a faultless suit with skirt ten inches from the floor.
